

Are you passionate about health care for adults with IDD?

The Vanderbilt Kennedy Center has a project to increase the use of the IDD Toolkit tools and resources. The IDD Toolkit is a website that has information for doctors, nurses, adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDD), and their family members or direct support professionals to support the health care for adults with IDD. The IDD Toolkit patient tools are forms for people with disabilities to fill out, with the help of family members or support persons, if needed, and to share with doctors and nurses to make health care visits or hospital stays more successful.

We are interested in learning what you as a patient think of the IDD Toolkit patient tools and in understanding what could increase the use of the tools by self-advocates such as yourself.

Would you be willing to meet with us by Zoom to discuss the IDD Toolkit patient tools and resources? You are welcome to have a family member or support person with you.

Your participation is completely voluntary. If you choose to participate in this study, you will receive a $50 Amazon gift card a few weeks after the interview. The interview will last about an hour.
